RUSSELL WORKWEAR 2009

We all know workwear has to work. Functionality, durability and manufacturing quality are all key to deciding which garments best suit the job. But equally we should never underestimate the value of good looks.

Put simply, we perform better when we feel good about the way we look and dress. And feeling comfortable increases motivation and efficiency. Our minds are on the job, not on our clothes. Being well dressed also sends out positive signals about the type of organisation we work for, about its standards and levels of professionalism.

The range of garments from Russell Workwear meets all these criteria; well designed individual garments that hang together to create workwear that reflects the needs of the workplace, the comfort of the wearer and values of the organisation.

Fabric, design, consistent colours and sizing mean you can build a coordinated company look. And all the workwear in our range can be easily personalised through print and embroidery. With Russell Workwear you can create your ideal work uniform, a combination of consistent appearance with great product quality.
